

Programme Outcome of Political Science

BA in Political Science is a three-year program designed to study state affairs, government affairs, political scenarios, and factors that led to the development of humans and technology in the world we are living in right now. It focuses on the structure of democratic ideology, political philosophies, political behaviours, political events, foreign affairs, and political development. This course teaches how to govern a country and the conceptions of a better democracy. The course gives a student insight into the knowledge of election campaigns, voting, political affairs on state and international levels, concepts of democracy, global perspectives and conflicts.

Studying Political Science helps a student in developing Communication skills, that is, will train a student how to convey and spread your ideas or thoughts in an effective way. It also develops Analytical Skills among the students by which they can thoroughly analyze policies or data and make solutions. Again, study of political science enhances Critical Skills of the students by which they can counter any problem. Sometimes a student needs to make strategies or take decision for future growth which is an integral part of critical skill. Above all, studying political science increases Reasoning Ability of the students which means thinking logically to analyze because a student always needs a fruitful valid reason for taking steps.

A student pursuing higher education in political science helps him to delve deeper into issues relating to the nation. A degree in Political Science can lead to powerful careers in state and local governments, law, business, international organizations, associations, and non-profit organizations (NGOs), campaign management and voting, journalism, elections politics, research, university, and college education. If world politics and the politics of nation excites a student then he must consider a career in political science .

Entry-level political science jobs are positions in the industry that typically cater to new graduates or new professionals who want to enter the field. Because working in political science can involve high volumes of research and interpreting complex information, many entry-level jobs in the industry focus on collecting and analyzing data. You can typically find several entry-level political science jobs during election seasons, as political campaigns often have positions for interns or lower-level staff members that also allow them to learn about being a professional in politics. It includes:

1. Social Media Intern
2. Legislative Assistant
3. Junior Research Analyst
4. Staff Assistance
5. Public Relations Assistant
6. Political Consultant
7. Paralegal
8. Market Researcher
9. Management Consultant
10. Policy Analyst
11. Law Associate